The future of language testing

Roger Johnson

Roger is an educational assessment expert with broad experience of developing strategy and introducing process improvements in the risk-averse environment of high-stakes examinations. Originally a teacher, trainer and examiner both in the UK and overseas, Roger then worked for Cambridge English for 25 years, in a wide range of roles. When he left Cambridge in 2017, he was Chief Operating Officer, leading a team of 360 staff members covering assessment design & content, QA & validation, distribution channel management and back-office operations. He has a particular interest in how developments in language teaching and testing can interact to deliver real benefits for learners and teachers. Roger has a first degree in law, a Master's in English teaching from the University of Manchester, and an MA from Cambridge University.

15:00 - 15:50 Motivate your Learners

Plenary
Session

Nick Michelioudakis

How can we motivate learners? Here is an idea: instead of trying to improve little things which our students simply ignore, why not focus instead on creating 'peak moments' in our lessons? This session will give four practical ideas for how we can introduce such 'Wow!' moments in class.

When it comes to human memory, some moments are more equal than others. Psychologists have discovered that 'peak' moments – and the way something ends – disproportionately colour our perception of events. There are four key elements which can help us create 'peak' moments in class:

Elevation: Any moment which rises above transient pleasure and can provide memorable delight. A poem, a text based on a painting, a moving ad can all create this feeling.

Pride: Engaging students in tasks which help them create something or perform exceptionally well. Mini-projects with Web 2.0 tools are particularly well-suited for this and in some cases only take minutes.

Insight: Moments which can rewrite our students' understanding of the world – a realisation which changes the way they see something. Content matters and should not just be 'catchy' topical texts but useful knowledge (and preferably counter-intuitive too).

Connection: Activities which help students bond – moments which are strengthened because they are shared with others. From sharing a personal memory to disclosing something about yourself, such tasks can make students feel they belong and boost class cohesion.

Sometimes, such 'Peak Moments' arise by themselves – and it is the teacher's job to grasp the opportunity and make the most of them. More often than not however, they need to be created. In this session we will demonstrate how this can be done by means of four easy, practical activities.

Plenary
Session

Dr Dimitris Maroulis

Language teachers have to engage learners in activities that make them aware of their learning potentials through using more than their stereotypical styles.

In the first part of this presentation, I will revise the main ideas of learning styles with emphasis on the perceptual filters. In the second part I will demonstrate, with the aid of the participants, a number of activities that can be used in the classroom for the style-stretching, again with emphasis on the sensory channels. The activities target different skills and language items and the participants will be able to learn the basic ingredients of how to make their lessons more "learning-style sensitive" and the language activities more "learning-style orientated".

Plenary
Session

Dr Irene Papakammenou

Greece has a strong examination culture which has changed significantly since more exams are developed and enter the market. Currently, 23 English language examinations are administered at B2 level and 17 at C2 level in Greece and they are approved by ASEP. This multi-exam context (Papakammenou, 2016) is rather challenging for both teachers and school owners.

The talk presents and describes the nature of the multi-exam context and it provides ways to handle such a context and use it in favour of the teachers and students. It refers to research and classroom practice in exam preparation courses in Greek Language Schools. It also considers issues for teacher development and training in order to better handle a multi-exam context. The presentation offers language teachers, administrators, teacher trainers, test constructors and material writers and publishers, insights directly relevant to their needs.

16:00 - 18:00 Effective Vocabulary Learning with Nick Michelioudakis

Workshop

'Why don't my students remember the words they have learned?' 'Are there simple and easy ways to ensure vocabulary retention?' 'Why don't my students use expressions they know and have studied?' The more important vocabulary is for our learners (and we know it is THE single most important component of language learning) the more pressing such questions become.

The workshop aims to help teachers by demonstrating:

- ...easy-to-use web tools for helping their students learn lexical items better
- ...simple strategies for helping students (and teachers themselves) build their vocabulary
- ...practical ideas for helping learners activate the words and expressions they have studied.

Ο ρόλος του εκπαιδευτικού συνδέεται άμεσα με την ανάπτυξη των παιδιών, το μέλλον κάθε χώρας και τη συνέχεια της κοινωνίας.

Ανάμεσα στους παράγοντες που συμβάλλουν στην επίτευξη του εκπαιδευτικού έργου είναι τα άτομα που ασκούν τη διοίκηση καθώς δημιουργούν τις προϋποθέσεις για τη δημιουργία ενός ευνοϊκού σχολικού κλίματος.

Για το λόγο αυτό είναι σημαντικό να γνωρίζουμε την επίδραση που έχει η συμπεριφορά του διευθυντή σε εκπαιδευτικούς και μαθητές καθώς και τα χαρακτηριστικά που πρέπει να διακατέχουν τον αποτελεσματικό ηγέτη.

Formalists enjoy Grammar to air authority. The public thinks Grammar is the spine of any language. The truth is that there are many different "Grammars" for different purposes in language learning. In this workshop we learn how many teaching methods there are for Grammar lessons. Then we introduce the idea of GR.I.T (Grammar Instances Theory) which can really provide teachers with an effective and applicable alternative to the well-known dry and uninspiring ways to teach Grammar. Through plenty of examples and case studies teachers will be ready to apply GR.I.T teaching tool at any level transforming Grammar into a skill.
